ARGOSY CRUISES TO DEBUT NEW NATIVE AMERICAN SHOW AT TILLICUM VILLAGE

SEATTLE – After nearly eleven months of planning, Argosy Cruises (Argosy) is set to debut the new show at Tillicum Village on March 19, 2011. In addition to the revamped show, Argosy has updated the menu and completely recreated the stage, sets, lighting, and regalia.

To ensure that visitors have a truly authentic Coast Salish Tribes experience, Argosy worked directly with tribal members from early on in the show planning process. The authenticity of the storytelling and regalia has been the number one priority of Argosy. “The relationship with tribal members has been instrumental in the development of the experience at Tillicum Village,” comments Argosy President and CEO, Kevin Clark. “Having their involvement and excitement has been pivotal in the development of the new experience at Tillicum Village. From the storytelling to the handmade regalia by one of the tribal elders, each element of the show is unique and true to the Coast Salish Tribes.”

In addition to new show content, Tillicum Village will debut state-of-the-art lighting and Musion technology that projects filmed imagery in a lifelike manner woven seamlessly with live acting to tell the story of the Coast Salish Tribes. The show purposely utilizes technology and historical live dance to project the native culture as one that has thrived and will continue to thrive in the Northwest. This combination is the most unique and compelling native cultural experience in the United States.
